DETAILED ACTION

1. Claim 7 objected to under 37 CFR 1.75(c) as being in improper form because a multiple dependent claim 7 depending on it self. See MPEP § 608.01(n). Accordingly, the claim 7 not been further treated on the merits.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-3, and 5-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Fedman (US006524135B1).

Fedman's device discloses an assembly of cable connectors, comprising:
at least two cable connectors (30) each of the connectors including a cable holder for holding at least one cable in a pre-selected regular position, the cable including a plurality of conductors (74), conductive terminals nodes at 45 respectively connected to conductors extending out of said cable and extending out of the cable holder, and insulative housing at 20 that holds said cable holder and terminals, the housing including a mating face for mating with an opposing mating connector, a conductive grounding shell (24, 26) covering upper and lower surfaces of said housing; and means for stacking the two cable connectors together as a unit of connectors, the stacking means including stacking protuberances protruding outwardly from opposite sides of said connector housings and flanking each other of the stacking protuberance; a pair of wings (64) extending from said conductive grounding shell in lateral directions along at least two of said protuberances; and, at least one clamping member at 102 engaging said two connector housings and holding together as a unit of connectors, the clamping member including a body portion having a height equal to a height of the two connector housings, the clamping member body portion including pair of spaced apart horizontal clamping holes or recesses , each of the clamping holes receiving at least one stacking protuberance and one grounding shell wing therein from different connector housings when stacking up the connectors (see figs. 7a-8b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 4 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over by Fedman (US006524135B1).

In regard to claim 4, Fedman's device discloses the aforementioned limitations, but fails to explicitly disclose the material the clamping member is made of. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have clamping member made of certain material, since it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select known material on the basis on its suitability for the in-intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416. It would have obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have clamping member made of certain material in order to meet the system requirement and specification.

In regard to claim 7, Fedman's device discloses the aforementioned limitations, but fails to explicitly disclose the shape of the shell wing as been an L-shape configuration, since such modification would have involved a mere change of a component. A change in shape is generally recognizing as being within the level of ordinary skill in the art. In re Dailey, 149 USPQ 47 (CCPA 1976). It would have been obvious matter of design choice to have the shell wing with the L-shape configuration in order to meet the system requirement and specification.
